

NEW EDITION FROM WESTVIEW PRESS!

WINNER OF THE 2006 W. W. HOWELLS BOOK AWARD

"In telling a story about our evolution that is grounded in real data and avoids popular psychobabble about the nature of human aggression, Man the Hunted is a substantial contribution to understanding humanity."

—Agustín Fuentes, University of Notre Dame

This award-winning text argues that primates, including the earliest members of the human family, have evolved as the prey of any number of predators, including wild cats and dogs, crocodiles, and even birds. Diverse evidence—ranging from scientific field observations, anecdotal evidence, and fossil records—informs the authors' provocative view of human evolution. The perils of being a primate in a world full of predators are vividly described through engaging and accessible writing. Entirely new to this edition is a chapter that presents the accumulating evidence in the fossil record of predation on early humans and challenges the alternative theory that, even if our ancestors weren't hunters, they were accomplished scavengers of meat.
