

Religion and Politics in the Middle East

IDENTITY, IDEOLOGY, INSTITUTIONS, AND ATTITUDES

Robert D. Lee

NEW FROM WESTVIEW PRESS!

"Clearly written and compelling ... Provides not only an excellent introductory text for undergraduate and graduate students, but one from which specialists in the field of Middle Eastern studies will find new perspectives and empirical data drawn from a cross-national context"

—Eric Davis, Rutgers University

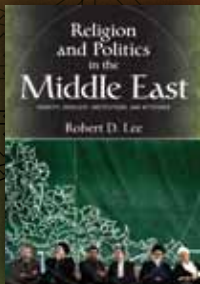

This innovative book analyzes the interaction of politics and religion in the Middle East through a comparative study of Egypt, Israel, Turkey, and Iran. Representing a learned yet accessible discussion and analysis of one of the most complex topics in the Middle East, this new book

- ◊ Explores four dimensions of the relationship between religion and politics in the Middle East: identity, ideology, institutions, and political culture.
- ◊ Explicitly lays out common (and often contradictory) hypotheses on the religion-politics relationship that variously argue that religion promotes or obstructs political development.
- ◊ Analyzes in depth four case studies—Egypt, Israel, Turkey, and Iran—that test and illuminate the general hypotheses.
