ROBERT TRAEER

New from Westview Press!

“Doing Environmental Ethics stands out among the many available textbooks on the topic because of its clarity and inclusiveness. ... I would recommend it as the first choice for any course on environmental issues.”

—Laura Westra, University of Windsor

This timely new book offers a way to face our ecological crisis that draws on environmental science, economic theory, international law, religious teachings, and philosophical arguments.

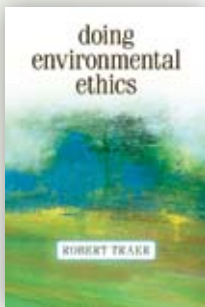

- Author Robert Traer teaches students to construct ethical presumptions based on duty, character, relationships, and rights, and then test these moral presumptions by predicting the likely consequences of acting on them.
- Students then apply what they have learned to specific policy issues, such as sustainable consumption, environmental policy, clean air and water, agriculture, managing public lands, urban ecology, and climate change.
- Study questions after each chapter and a worksheet for doing environmental ethics aid students in deciding how to live more responsibly as consumers and as citizens.
