

NEW FROM WESTVIEW PRESS!

“This is just the right collection of readings to inspire and inform prospective and practicing teachers alike. It is the perfect text for introducing students to the social forces affecting public schooling in America.”

—BARRY M. FRANKLIN, UTAH STATE UNIVERSITY

Designed specifically for students with little or no education background, Eleanor Blair Hilty's Thinking About Schools features:

- Classic readings from the 1960s to today, as well as thought-provoking popular essays that will engage students and encourage critical thinking about vital education issues.
- Accessible internal organization and pedagogy including an introduction, discussion questions, a guide to further reading, and related resources for each part.
- Complete and balanced coverage perfect for foundations courses and at a much better value than other readers currently available.

MARCH 2011, 560 PAGES, 978-0-8133-4490-4, $55.00, PB
