Transforming American Politics Series

NEW FROM WESTVIEW PRESS!

“Jason Johnson brings theoretical power and real-world data together in this compelling study of how we organize and run modern political campaigns.”

—Charles Cushman Jr., Director, Graduate School of Political Management,
George Washington University

“Few campaign management texts successfully navigate between political science research and wisdom garnered from the trenches. [This book] finds that narrow pathway in grand fashion.”

—Daniel M. Shea, Professor of Political Science, Allegheny College

An essential resource for courses on American politics and campaigns and elections, this ground-breaking new book features:

- ★ A thorough comparison of political science theory to real-life consultant behavior on everything from policy positioning to Internet strategy to negative advertising.
- ★ Original survey data from consultants, campaign managers, and professional campaign schools to explore consultants' roles and their impact on elections.
- ★ Accessible, engaging writing, with interesting anecdotes and case studies linking campaigns and strategy all over the country.
